

"The Voluntary System of Enlistments will continue. Our motto is to be 'Business as Usual,'" said the Director-General of Recruiting.

Australia has to find 7,000 men per month, and it is the earnest wish of every Australian citizen that the greater part of that number will be composed of men who enlist their services voluntarily.

Australia has sent her troops to fight a foe who, prompted by the dream of a world's aggression, waged war on humanity in such a manner that every true British patriot could not resist the desire to suppress this brutal exponent of Prussian Kultur. In suppressing that foe, Australia has sent 315,000 volunteers. These men left their positions, ambitions, and homes to respond to a great call of manhood. How they responded is told in the story of Anzac, France and Palestine. These men have fought on for three years, and seen their regiments diminish, but have never voiced one word of complaint.

Their Commander, General Birdwood, has now voiced their opinion, and it is not one of complaint; it is a direct appeal to the manhood of Australia to go to their help.

YOUR MATES WANT YOUR HELP VOLUNTARILY.
STAND NOT UPON THE ORDER OF YOUR GOING.
